Mom and Dad Can Remain Independent in Their Home

Mom and Dad's Home is the place they know and feel secure, the community and amenities they trust, the place where awesome memories were formed of kids growing, grandkids playing, friends laughing.

You're concerned about mom and dad tripping, slipping, falling, scalding or struggling to catch their breath (think forest fire smoke); after all, they are alone without your in person support. You want to see them thrive. Losing independence because of their home is horrifying for your parents. Imagine losing your own. Your parents deserve the best and the retirement lodge is not the best for their mental health. Research shows that staying in their own home is best for their wellbeing, provided that the home enables their independence. It is also much cheaper to update their home to accessible compared to selling commissions and moving costs, not to mention the high monthly lodge rental costs.

Achieving your peace of mind because they're safe, independent, and comfortable in their own home which they already trust, is vital. Proven upgrades, transform an existing limiting home into their forever home to thrive in independently. These upgrades also increase the home value, growing the potential inheritance instead of draining on monthly rental.

Expert leadership is essential to transform their forever home, integrating their unique needs, constraints and environment. Comfort height toilet without proper supports, or new flooring without coordinated lighting, or bathroom renovation without flow consideration, installing isolated items will NOT help your parents. Neither will the occupational therapist who lacks renovations expertise or diverse solutions knowledge.

A Certified Aging in Place Specialist offers the many skills required to deliver on your desire of enabling your parents to remain independent while letting you to sleep at night. You will also learn how to prepare your own forever home.
